

Boomers Often Manage Family Finances

Baby boomers often have frequent financial worries, including how to manage their parents' financial affairs while also gifting money to their children. Here are some answers to common questions on the topic.

How Can You Suggest Someone Talk to Parents About Finances?

If a friend has dealt with a tough situation like a parent dying or becoming incapacitated, that can provide you with a reason. Another option is to explain that you read an article that suggested it's important to talk to your parents about these decisions while they are mentally sharp.

What Are the Three Most Important Things You Need to Have in Place for Your Parents?

You need to have them create a living will concerning life support decisions, a health care proxy to manage health care decisions if needed. It's also important to have a durable power of attorney in which you are named so that you can make financial decisions on their behalf if they become incapacitated.

What if You Find Out That Your Parents Will Need Help?

Open communication is important. Sometimes the options your parents want are disproportionate to their financial means and the siblings' time availability. It's also helpful to get a third-party assessment; having a qualified outside person involved can provide a neutral unemotional facilitator.

Switching to Children, How Can You Prepare the Next Generation for Inheriting Money so They Don't Become "Trust Fund Darlings?"

Consult both your wealth advisor and your tax professional very early in the process. Planning can be crucial during this transition. You'll need to determine how much of the proceeds you'll receive and how much you'll owe in taxes, especially if you have reached a higher tax bracket. Having an estimate of what proceeds are yours to keep can eliminate emotions and an unexpected tax problem.

How Can Parents Prepare Children for the Responsibilities That Go Along With Managing Wealth or a Family Business?

One of the best ways to introduce children to a family business is to enlist him or her to serve as an intern in the business or in another family's business. It's also beneficial to help children secure a shorter, job-shadowing experience with a trusted adviser of the family business. Sometimes a child's greatest learning comes from failing. As parents, we just have to avoid enabling or rescuing our children when that happens.

For more information visit: marinerwealthadvisors.com

This piece is limited to the dissemination of general information pertaining to Mariner Wealth Advisors' investment advisory services. The views expressed are for commentary purposes only and do not take into account any individual personal, financial, or tax considerations. As such, the information contained herein is not intended to be personal legal, investment or tax advice or a solicitation to buy or sell any security or engage in a particular investment strategy. Nothing herein should be relied upon as such, and there is no guarantee that any claims made will come to pass.

Some services listed in this piece are provided by affiliates of MWA and are subject to additional fees. Additional fees may also apply for tax planning and preparation services.

Mariner Wealth Advisors ("MWA") is an SEC registered investment adviser. Registration of an investment adviser does not imply a certain level of skill or training. MWA is in compliance with the current notice filing requirements imposed upon registered investment advisers by those states in which MWA maintains clients. MWA may only transact business in those states in which it is notice filed, or qualifies for an exemption or exclusion from notice filing requirements. Any subsequent, direct communication by MWA with a prospective client shall be conducted by a representative that is either registered or qualifies for an exemption or exclusion from registration in the state where the prospective client resides. For additional information about MWA, including fees and services, please contact MWA or refer to the Investment Adviser Public Disclosure website (www.adviserinfo.sec.gov). Please read the disclosure statement carefully before you invest or send money.